

Path Well

“ Path Well is a practice designed to identify and prioritize the stories and dreams of various groups across different levels of connection and experience.

Context

Path Well is a practice that helps identify and prioritize the stories and dreams of different groups, recognizing the diverse connections and influences that shape our world. The five paths include:

People (individuals)

Focuses on the needs and stories of individuals in their personal, family, and professional lives.

Populations (groups)

Includes diverse groups such as families, collectives, companies, and other informal or formal communities.

Places (spaces)

Examines real, virtual, natural, and other spaces, including those that are seen, hidden, contested, imaginary, or forgotten.

Publics (communities)

Considers larger shared environments like cities, municipalities, and public spaces where people gather and interact.

Planet (systems)

Looks at environmental and systemic connections that shape the wellbeing of all living things on a global scale.

Codicil

Examples in arts and culture

Revision #2
Created 14 December 2024 08:44:12 by ArtsPond
Updated 27 January 2025 00:06:29 by ArtsPond